

Capitol Commission Partners

Since the majority of the governing official's time is exhausted in their home districts, it is important for Capitol Commission to serve them while they are home. Capitol Commission's desire, therefore, is to build a network of individuals who are convinced of and dedicated to the mission of making disciples of our government leaders (1 Tim 2:1-4). Capitol Commission is seeking individuals that will actively minister to their local leaders as a part of their regular ministry work.

A Capitol Commission Partner is someone . . .

- . . . who understands God has ultimately placed these leaders in office for His purposes and glory (Rom 13:1-5; Tit 3:1-2). Regardless of party affiliation or political stances, God has placed them in office to be of serve to Him.
- . . . who is resolved to pray for the souls of the government officials that serve his or her district: Federal Senators, Congressmen, State Senators and Representatives, county and city officials. Partners pray for their government officials to be saved and/or to grow in the grace and knowledge of God. Partners pray for their government officials by name on a regular basis.
- . . . who will attempt to meet with their legislative officials at least once throughout the year. The meeting will be for the purpose of ministering to the legislator. The expression of political views is not the goal and does not reflect the ministry of Capitol Commission. It is vital to let the legislators know that there are people praying for them who are concerned about them as people.
- . . . who is resolved to pray for Capitol Commission Georgia. Partners pray that the minister in the Capitol will be bold in proclaiming the Gospel and wise in discipling the believers in their growth of the grace and knowledge of God.
- . . . who will attempt to be a part of area-wide gatherings that are organized for the purpose of ministering to his or her leaders.

A strong working relationship between dedicated believers and Capitol Commission can provide a powerful team of ministry to our leaders.
